

SESSIONAL SPORT COACHING TUTOR POSITION

‘Sport Coaching and Coaching Ecosystems’ is a specific field of study within the Bachelor of Exercise and Sport Science undergraduate degree at Deakin University. The ‘major’ explores the multifaceted role of coaches within the sports industry and delves into the interactions between coaches, athletes, sport scientists, and organizational staff. Student graduates will be equipped to navigate the intricacies of modern sports coaching, fostering success for athletes and organisations alike.

Deakin University is currently looking for sessional tutors for sport coaching in 2025. If you are interested in working in a dynamic team to support student learning in sport coaching, this opportunity may be of interest to you. Please note, classes are held during weekdays at either the Burwood or Geelong campuses.

Prerequisites: Applicants do not require tertiary qualifications, however experience in sport coaching is essential, at any level (community through to high performance). Experience in the design or facilitation of sport coach development programs is an advantage. Please note, all teaching materials and professional development will be provided.

If you are interested in applying for a sessional position, please contact Ass. Professor Helen Brown at: h.brown@deakin.edu.au and attach a resume.
